A radiant beauty of the lovely south . . 131
At a lone inn, one dreary, dismal night . . 139
Alas, how soon the heart forgets 152
A train pass'd through the old church door, 172
A kiss, a kiss, my dearest 180
A knight and a lady once met in a grove . 200
A maiden asked of a youth one day . . . 200
Ask not if still I love 200
As I was sitting in a wood 246
Another—lay her down 256
A gentle creature was that girl 288
Alone after dinner I happened to spy . . 304
An artist painted Time and Love . . . 312
A warriour comes o'er the swelling wave . 362
A country curate visiting his flock . . 392
Beside Ohio's swelling wave 166
Bombastes the brave, and the fair Velvatine 236
Beneath an aged locust-tree 390
Bring me forth the cup of gold 400
Come to me ere the sad leaves fall . . . 120
Come hither, come hither, come hither . . 128
Come ye, come ye, to the green, green wood 182
Come, rouse thee, dearest 264
Creative power, by heaven ordained to guide 343
Dark is the night! How dark! No light! . 175
Dreaming for ever, fondly dreaming . . 224
Don't talk to me of London dames . . . 400
Fading, still fading, is written on all . . 14
From some old Turk, a hundred years ago 144
Fleetly o'er the moonlight snows . . . 162
From a beach of yellow sand 199
Forget thee—if to dream by night . . . 200
God bless the royal pair 288
Hail, sire! thou to thy cherished France . 37
Heavy is my trembling heart 42
High-born, and fair, and gentle 44
Her midnight watch the mother keepeth . 99
How sweet the tuneful bells 102
He told his love at vesper hour 132
How sweet the bond of christian love . . 168
Hush, sweet lute, by Thomas Moore . . . 208
Hail blessed day of universal rest . . . 212
He pass'd away amid the flush of June . . 219
How like the map that marks my way . . 256
How gallantly our battle-ship 283
Hark! from yonder holy pile 311
Hark! through the woods, by Mrs. Norton . 335
In times not very old, by Tyrone Power . . 8
It must be so—true love alone could pen . 26
I dream'd a dream in my slumbers . . . 35
I met once, in my girlish hours 40
I knew a widow, very poor 62
It was the winter time, and winter flowers 87
It is a stormy night, and the wild sea . . 90
I do remember it—'twas such a face . . 94
It is a noisy morning, yet the sky . . . 96
I am going, Jessie, far from thee 102
It is not that sweet herbs and flowers alone 104
I know thou'rt still surpassing fair . . . 108
I am a bold smuggler 112
I hear thy voice, O spring 127
In youth's sunny morning 128
If you'll tell me the reason 152
I have woo'd thee, I have won thee . . . 163
It is the mid-watch of a Yule-tide night . 169
I'm sitting on the stile, Mary 175
I saw him, Lucy, only once 194
I wandered out one summer night . . . 222
I knew two friends, as much alike . . . 224
If Hope be dead why seek to live 239
If there is a time, by Boz 252
I'm sorry to say I'm a maiden forlorn . . 259
It is not growing like a tree 264
I dare thee to forget me 270
I mean to be a soldier 278
In Judah's hall the harp is hushed . . . 299
I knew they would perish 304
I sought a token of my love 334
I never have been false to thee 354
I cannot give thee all my heart 376
I have thy love, by Sir E. L. Bulwer . . 387
Love built a bower the blue sea a-nigh . . 6
Love sat in his bower one summer day . . 11
Like as the damask rose you see 16
Love, with a lady—would you know . . 19
Like an enfranchised bird 120
Look upon those clouds that lie 166
Long years have pass'd, old friend, since we 176
Long as I waltzed with only thee 254
Lord Erlach watched the waning moon . . 324
My beautiful Arabian steed 25
Mine island prize 26
My father, thou hast not the tale denied . 34
Methought I gazed on one I long had known 124
Mourn, for a nation's hope is dead . . . 136
My lovely mistress, age will come to thee . 140
My native land! There's magic in the word 209
Major Macpherson was a very nice man . 272
Man wants but little here below 310
My heid is like to rend, Willie 322
Never look sad, nothing so bad 32
Not a star was seen in the heavens above . 72
Not a sound was heard 78
Now, give me but a cot that's good . . . 90
Not married yet—ah, let me think . . . 102
Now spring the living herbs, profusely wild 182
Old winter is coming again 3
Oh, treasured thus by passion's slave . . 35
Oh, if the winds could whisper 64
Oh mighty universe 75
Oh lady, in the blaze of day 78
Once in a dream I saw a shape of power . 90
Once—but she died—I knew a village maid 92
Oh can it be, my muse, that you and I . . 103
Oh days gone by, so bright, so heavenly fair 118
Oh could these drooping flowers 166
Oh! why did I not tell her sooner . . . 320
Once, ere my heart was darkly stirred . . 326
Pray, Mr. Dram-drinker, how do you . . 286
Records of hours, with joy inwrought . . 27
Surely I heard a voice 46
Sleep, my Leila, do not fear 91
She loved him, as most modern misses love . 94
Soul of living music, teach me 162
Sweet spirit of health, on the wings of the air 168
So Miss Myrtle is going to marry . . . 200
Still thou fliest, and still I woo thee . . . 224
Stay, traveller, guess who lies here . . . 230
Some think we bards have nothing real . . 246
Soft o'er the mountain's brow 272
Say, mighty Love, and teach my song . . 294
St. Florent! gleams the rising sun . . . 300
Sadly it sounds, by Henry B. Hirst . . . 376
Sonnets on Italy, Greece and Poland . . 383
She's very fair and beautiful 388
Sad monument of olden time 391
'Twas the night before New-Year . . . 7
Thou wilt forget 16
'Tis a lesson you should heed 16
'Tis not the hour her lover named . . . 17
They kneel round the altar 19
Take back thy portrait, and restore me mine 27
The lady she sate in her bower alone . . 42
Time was never made to lose 54
Though the white foam-wave throws me . 54
Thought's fount is stirr'd 62
The brewers should to Malta go 72
Take, then, back your foolish token . . . 83
Thy name was once the magic spell . . . 83
Thy steed awaits—'tis weak, 'tis wrong . 83
There the rose unveils 91
There's a star in the west 147
'Twas a bitter night in the winter time . . 150
To live with the spring, with the roses to die 152
Thou art false but I cannot forget thee . . 160
Through hamlet, city and province we roam 164
There's something strange, I know not what 184
There's not a charm that hath a dwelling . 194
The sloping rays of the declining sun . . 196
This gift—this fragrant gift of thine . . . 216
Thou art so like a dream of heaven . . . 232
Though lightly sounds the song 232
Think on me, by Tyrone Power 239
Thirty springs have exactly elapsed . . . 253
The breeze of night hath sunk to rest . . 254
This book is all that's left me now . . . 260
The mountain torrent and the rill . . . 264
To raise our souls from transitory things . 268
They may sing in their glee, by H. B. Hirst 284
To the rescue, Canadians 303
'Twas on a winter's morning 317
The sun athwart the Indian main . . . 321
The flowers you reared repose in sleep . 354
The sky of life had oft been clouded . . . 380
Thine is a queenly beauty 384
The evening star with lingering ray . . . 390
Upon his throne and girt with all his state . 22
Unbind thee, love, by Thomas Moore . . 216
When I was a wee little slip of a girl . . 24
Would I were with thee every day and hour 46
Would you, lady fair, discover 62
Where's the ring I gave to thee 95
When the belle of fifteen gets sight of a beau 104
When wert thou born, Desire 118
Whence thy unutterable charm, O spring . 144
When from the sod the flow'rets spring . . 147
When Love, who ruled as admiral o'er . . 157
We are born; we laugh, we weep 192
Where do you linger, say, Harry Russell . 231
When the battle is o'er 246
With a burning brow and a weary limb . . 269
When all is done and said 296
We were boys together 316
What! for a word, an idle word 360
We mourn for the death of the wise . . . 390
Yes, thou art changed since first we met . 200
Yours of the 10th is just received . . . 230
